

hen Dr. Gail Bongiovanni toured Priory Court just before the opening of the Junior League of Greater Princeton's 17th bennial Designer Showhouse & Gardens, she felt like her mother, Lucille, was string on her shoulder, arched casement windows. It's a piece of art, really, "Gail said of the Gothe-scyeld home her parents lad owned." My mother used saw what all of these incredibly talented decorators did with these windows, and I could hear my mother laughing and saying. "Als now that's what they could do,"."
"They "refers to the 28 interior and landscape designers who spens its weeks patting their personal stamp on their assigned spaces." everything from a butter's pattry to a doister house/music room to the grounds - for an event that is the Junior League's most successful fundraiser com to the grounds - for an event that is the Junior League's most successful fundraiser interesting. They did a great jot beregoring the architecture of the house, and they didn't cover the windows, they let them stand out. I was very pleased. It was, truly, a showhouse."

The day Gail spent at the house - she lives in Gircinards, where she is garbert at the house.

The day Gail spent at the house - she lives in Cincinnati, where she is gastroenterologist - was a joyful reminder of the past, and a celebration of her parents' ties to the Princeton community "There were a lot of people I didn't know, but who knew my parents," Gail said, "It was like celebrating them, and the beauty that was brought to their hou-

THE LANDSCAPE DESIGN WAS PERFORMED BY

All for a good cause

THE LANDSCARP ESSON WAS FEROMED BY BITTERS. THE LANDSCARP ESSON WAS FEROMED BY BITTERS. THE LANDSCARP A BURSEN'S THAN LEGALS WAS THE LANDSCARP A BURSEN'S LA

publicaces the event. When doors open to the public, Junor League members and sustainers are on hand to act as docents.

From start to finish, the process takes longer than a year.

From start to finish, the process takes longer than a year.

But, the investment of time and efforts is well spent as the Junior League's largest fundraiser, proceeds from the Showhouse enable the Junior League to continue its commitment of giving back to the commanuity frough programs and projects focused on increasing the literay skills for young to the commanuity frough programs and projects focused on increasing the literay skills for young the public properties of the public properties of the proper children and their parents.

More than 3,000 people toured the Priory House in 2012. Ticket sales, corporate sponsorships donations, and proceeds from the café, bouriques, designer sales, Patron's Party and Silent Auction netted $115,000 for the group. (In total, Showhouses have netted $1,125,000 since the first one of the Junior Larges open 2013, an off year helping Mercer County Dross For Success Membergheems in the Going Flasses vieweds by Wilstein, Wilstein provided a grant no cover the costs of hosting the program, and the Junior League provided the presenters and mentors.

in 1974.]

in 1974.]

This was the first year well unsched a partnership with Dross For Success, "and Christina Balley, the Junior League's communications chair. "We worked in a classroom setting for eight or nine weeks with about 20 clients – these were women who wanted to get Back to work or improve their the seeks with about 20 clients – these were women who wanted to get Back to work or improve their many the seeks with about 20 clients – these were women who wanted to get Back to work or improve their many than the seeks with about 20 clients – these were women who wanted to get Back to work or improve their many than the seeks with about 20 clients – these were women who wanted to get Back to work or improve their many than the seeks and the seeks with about 20 clients – these were women who wanted to get Back to work or improve their many than the seeks with about 20 clients – these were women who wanted to get Back to work or improve their many than the seeks with about 20 clients – these was the seeks with about 20 clients – these was the seeks with about 20 clients – these waters are seeks to be a seek to be a seek the seeks which are seeks and the seeks with a seek the seeks with a seeks with a seek the seeks with a seeks with a seeks with a seek the seeks with a seek the seeks with a seeks wit job situation."

Minda added, "These women come from difficult situations, and are recommended through community institutions." Classes are held in Lawrenceville, at Dress For Success' Mercer

Lawrenceville, at Dress For Success' Mercer County headquarters.
Going Places is an organization with a 40-percent success rate across the country. Eighteen women "graduated" from the first one sponsored by the Junior League, and three or four were already back at school or placed in four were already back at school or placed in Minda served as a mentor, coaching a single mother of small children. The woman had mother of small children. The woman had been laid off, and was thrilled when she was chosen for the program. "We helped her with her job search, and get-ting her resume together. She had never been in an office setting before, so she didn't know she couldn't wear jeans," said Minda. "She was very grateful, and wrote me a note thanking very grateful, and wrote me a note thanking me for my mentroship. She gob for degree in July, and is very motivated to make a better life for herself and her children."

Other Junior League members lent their skills to the classes as well.

Wendy Komjathy, a co-chair for the 2014 Showhouse, said she worked with Katie to Showhouse, said she worked with Kathe to present two sessions: how to put your best face forward, and interview skills. "We talked about how when you walk into an office, you need to pay attention to all the people around you, because they're paying at-tention to you," said Wendy. "And, we talked about the interview reverse. The interview the province of the province of the province provinces. The province was the province to the province of the province to about the interview process - not just what they should ask in an interview, but also could be [legally] asked of them, giving them insight to ensure an employer didn't overstep his or her bounds."

Any uncertainty Wendy and Katie felt at the beginning of the sessions was soon replaced with elation.

"We left there [the sessions] feeling so good. It was so nice to meet and interact with these ladies, and so much fun to see the different ladies, and so much fun to see the different personalities," said Wendy.

"We learned a little about the women: one was a college student, another was underem-ployed," said Katie. "We've done so many good things for children, so to add this was really nice and rewarding."

For almost eight years, Christina explained, the Junior League "worked almost exclusively with ROCKETS (Raising Our Children's Knowledge by Educating Through Science). We also originated Teacher Launch Seminar," a one-day workshop for pre-school/early elementary teachers designed to encourage more hands-on science in the classroom. For details, visit www.jlpg.org.

A complete makeover, inside and out
While the Showhouse raises money – and lots of it – for local community programs, it raises something else as well: visibility for the designers.

As Kaite Herspiegel, a co-chair of the 2012 Showhouse, said, "It's career-making for some designers."

As Kasie Hengingal, a co-chair of the 2012 Showhouse, said, "lis sarree-making for some designers," Karlie's counterprat, Minda Alena, said "When we were approaching designers for the 2012 event, Deborah Leamann told us that if it weren't for the Junior League, she would never have made it. It launched her business and kept the successful, as it has for so many others." Deborah Leamann would agene. The owner of Deborah Leamann iterior Design, based in Pennington, NJ, was "extremely flat-tered," when invited to participate in her first Showhouse in 1932: "What it does, specially for new and upcoming designers, is get what you do into a lot of pen-"What it does, specially for new and upcoming designers, is get what you do into a lot of penple's line of vision very quickly. It also shows that you're serious, and that it's not just a hob-by, but a career," she said.

The intensity of the process (lots of early mornings and late nights, packing and un-packing, and hauling things here and there) is packing, and naturing things here and there's is quickly forgotten "once the phone calls start coming in. It becomes a little irresistible! It's a total high."

For Deborah, "It's the greatest thing since ror Denoran, "its the greatest thing since sliced bread." She likens Patron's Night to "opening night on Broadway. You're standing [in the room you've decorated] and watching people react, and you hear them say things like, 'Wow, this is fabulous!'" like, Wow, this is fabulous!"

Deborah participates in a Showhouse as often as possible, both for the philanthropic contribution, and the challenge of pulling something together very quickly.

At the Priory House, Deborah decorated the

At the Priory Flouse, Deboran accorated the Cloister House music room, where Albert Ein-stein once performed. "The room was exquisite -- and huge!" Deb-orals said. Her solution was to create three intimate seating areas, layer rugs on top of one another, and install a custom-made bookcase and a concert grand piano.

"I knew the room 'worked' when people passing through sat down to play the piano," she said. A Showhouse's grounds also are primped for the exposure.

At Priory Court, six landscape design companies worked to transform the home's grounds mes worked to transform the nome's grounds for the event. Kris Santiago of Rutgers Land-scape and Nursery describes the process as a lovely way to connect with the community and try new stuff.

"You can really be playful. We had fun with Priory Court because it was an older stone Priory Court because it was an older stone home, and we could play off that rough stoni-ness with planters. We used a sculpture by Ste-ven Snyder from Point Pleasant, PA, as part of one section. He was so gracious to loan us one of his sculptures." MW Middle School Open House [Grades 5 - 8] Tuesday, November 5th 9:00 a.m.

Upper School Open House [Grades 9 - 12] Sunday, November 17th 2:00 p.m.

609-924-6700 x1200 www.pds.org